President's Message, 2016

Doris Aldrich

If you are reading this Women to the World's Tri-Annual Report, you certainly realize we share years of history together. We build upon this history as we give you a small glimpse of our past few months of service to at-risk women and their children, and leave with you a hint of our future hopes.

You can clearly see that together with you, Women to the World has managed to structure excellence unprecedented, through useful talent available at home and abroad. Men and women serving as Board Directors and Trainers are volunteers. This is Women to the World's unique strength in discovering creative ways to more than double the value of each donation. This approach awards great advantage as we continue to build a solid, sustainable plan for the future. National workers remain in training and train others for permanent, sustainable survival programs.

Our focus these past three productive years has been that of applying training for our women in need of secure escape mechanisms. Education and job-skill training are two of the strongest forces in overcoming violence, illiteracy, and poverty. These elements are consistently interwoven into all programs - with predictable, measurable results. Trained leaders function as mentor, teacher, counselor, friend, and advisor throughout various stages of a families' healing, spiritual growth, literacy and economic freedom.

Small farms abroad, family literacy, advanced education, and creative micro-businesses have proven a basis for avoiding the pitfalls of bias that lead to prejudice and abuse.

We celebrate our thirty-second year of service this year, primarily focusing on the 10/40 Window, often saturated with war and famine that leads to misplaced people groups. Our fight for freedom and hope will remain purposed and strong as resources are available and methods continue to be strongly successful. Domestic programs here in the United States bloom with the beauty of His Grace alone.

We ask that you include Women to the World in your estate planning, pray for our Board expansion, pray for all beneficiaries we serve worldwide, and join us as we pray together for creative ways to respond to new opportunities around the globe.

Our sincere respect is extended to volunteer Staff Members, Staff Members, Country Directors, Mentors, Boards, Partners, Friends and to you, the Donor. May God richly bless you in the year ahead.
